See the Pastor—how fat and handsome he is getting, and he never misses one. Try it.

—The city is figuring on putting in a new watering tank on the west side of the square, and have let the contract to Schulte Bros., so we are informed. They are contemplating putting in a furnace under the tank, or some kind of a heating apparatus, to keep the water from freezing in the tank. A very good idea. We understand that there is a stove manufactured for this purpose, that sets right down in the water in the tank and is fired from the top, the draft also being from the top. It might pay to investigate this.

—Samuel Cooper, a veteran of the civil war, as a member of the 5th M. S. M., died suddenly at the home of his son Earl, near Curzen, on Wednesday, December 13, 1905, aged 86 years. Mr. Cooper in the early evening preceding his death, complained of his stomach, and obtained relief on taking some medicine and retired for the night. In the early morning he was again attacked with stomach trouble, and his son and wife went to his aid and relieved him, leaving him about 4 a. m. resting comfortably. They arose for their day's duties about 6 a. m. and at once went to the bedside of their father, only to find his spirit had gone to the God who gave it. The funeral was conducted the following day from the home by Elder Hardman, and the remains were laid to rest in the Maple Grove cemetery of this city.

—At last the county has decided to build a new bridge at Doc Swopes south of the city. The material has been placed on the ground and workmen are engaged in putting in the abutments. The bridge will be a 50-foot span and a good one. The traveling public will be glad to learn that this bridge is being built.—Jeffersonian.

It will be remembered that Warrie Walker, about a year ago, went south for his health, and bought a 60 acre truck patch near Biloxi, Miss., putting up $1,200 of the coin of the realm for the patch. Last week he was offered $2,500 for the same 60 acres and he sold it, of course. He will stay south this winter, and when the robins come again, we expect to see him back again amid the scenes of his boyhood days.

—Dr. Martha Petree had rather an exciting experience for a few minutes last Sunday evening. She had started out to make a professional call and was driving up the street past the Thos. Hinde residence, when a pair of loose mules came running up the street and frightened her horse. It started to run and turned the buggy over and threw her and her niece, Lou Petree, and nephew, Lowell Petree, out. The occupants all escaped with some pretty severe bruises, but no serious injuries. The buggy didn't escape so easily. The thoroughly frightened horse ran between a pile of wood and Moore & Kreek's store, narrowly missing his large plate glass windows, then turned down the street to the bench in front of the Post Office, where the buggy was left, a complete wreck.

—Judge G. W. Murphy, of Oregon, delivered a temperance lecture in the Methodist church last Sunday evening, the other churches joining in a union service. Judge Murphy is a logical and forcible speaker and gave some historical facts in reference to the agitation against the liquor traffic that were at least new to us. The Judge brought forward evidence to show that the war against the liquor traffic has been going on for at least 4,300 years, during which time the authorities have been trying to regulate it and he concludes that as a remedy for the evil regulation does not fill the bill. During the judge's talk the caride gave out that supplies the light for the church and it so happened that as the slowly fading light was growing dimmer each moment the judge's remarks were reaching that point where he said, "What we pray for is more light," and immediately the church was enveloped in complete darkness. After a time the judge was enabled to proceed by the dim reflection of two coal oil lamps.—Burlington Junction Post, December 8.
